I started the role of a PCW at a First school in September 2005 and the time has really flown by as I am now almost at the end of my second year. This was a new role for the school as well as me and I have really grown into this and been welcomed by the school.

The PCW role is a privilege and amazing opportunity to practically demonstrate God's love to the children and their families, and to the wider staff and school community. Most importantly, I want to try and share with you the miracle of a small boy full of distrust and anger who I have seen melt and soften with love, patience and kindness.

This young boy has slowly been transformed into a calmer, quieter, more self controlled child who knows he is loved. God is amazing and what these children need is to show that you love, listen and show that you care.

We can do this as PCWs because God has done this for us first.

God bless you
